Can i study free in norway. Is studying in norway expensive. Is it easy to study in norway. Is it hard to study in norway. Is studying in norway worth it.

When it comes to the educational aspects, Norway offers much more than many popular countries. It may not be the first destination that pops into your mind when you think about studying abroad. However, with its high academic standards and creative teaching skills, Norway provides education in the best way possible. The educational institutions in the country offer a wide range of combinations of subjects to study, with many courses available in English. So, if you are thinking about going to Norway to continue your studies, go through this guide to know what to expect. Tuition Fees Educational institutions in Norway are quite expensive, though not more than popular destinations. Tuition fees hold a significant portion of the expenses you bear while studying in another country. However, most public universities in Norway do not charge any fees for local and international students. It is a big plus for students who cannot afford education abroad. If you want to enroll in a private college in Norway, the tuition fee can be between 7000 EUR to 9000 EUR for undergraduate courses and 9000 EUR to 20,000 EUR for masters. Accommodation The cost of living in Norway might be higher than that in your home country. Everyday expenses, such as food, travel, etc., are pricey, but you will get used to them eventually. Most students either rent an apartment or go for student housing, which is a cheaper option. The accommodation prices may vary depending on which city and locality you reside in. Accommodation in Norway ranges from 1000 to 1900 EUR in the city center and 800 to 1400 EUR outside the city center. Other Expenses Apart from accommodation, you will have to bear other expenses such as food, travel, books, etc. In Norway, most international students use public transportation to get around the city. You can also take advantage of the student ID cards issued by Norwegian universities to get great discounts. A transportation card in Norway can cost between 50 to 80 EUR, while cabs cost about 1.5 EUR per kilometer. Restaurants in Norway are not that expensive either. Usually, food will cost between 250 to 400 EUR per month. To save money on food, avoid eating in expensive restaurants and use public transport to travel around the city. You can buy groceries from supermarkets that offer discounts on everyday items. Learning how to cook can also prove to be a great advantage while living in Norway. However, if you are dining out, an inexpensive restaurant will cost about 20 EUR, whereas expensive ones can charge over 70 EUR for a meal. Best UniversitiesThe education system in Norway comprises both public and private universities and colleges. International students prefer to study in these Norwegian institutions with hundreds of courses and programs than the ones in other countries. Public universities in Norway do not charge any tuition fees, even for international students. By saving the tuition fees, you can deal with other expenses with ease. Here are some of the best educational institutions in Norway for you: BI Norwegian Business School Bergen University CollegeThe Arctic University of Tromsø, NorwayNorwegian University of Science and TechnologyUniversity of NordlandOslo Metropolitan UniversityUniversity of BergenUniversity of StavangerUniversity of Oslo Student Visa To go to Norway for higher education, you must obtain a student residence permit. This permit allows you to stay in Norway for longer than three months and complete your course. Apply for the visa 2-4 months before you go to Norway for your studies. You will need some evidence to show that you are financially capable of living in Norway and even go through a medical examination. The guide sums it up for students who are planning their higher education in Norway. Lots of international students choose to study in Norway - and it's little wonder why. From the magnificent fjords, to the vibrant capital Oslo, Norway captures the true essence of Scandinavia. Unlike in some countries, international students can find themselves in any number of cities, including Oslo, Stavanger, Bergen and Tromsø. Want to study in Norway? Find & compare programs Search Norway is home to some great schools, like the University of Oslo, the University of Bergen and the Arctic University of Tromsø. It's also home to some great specialized schools, like the Norwegian University of Life Sciences in Ås and the Oslo National Academy of the Arts. Adding to Norway's attraction is the fact that there are no tuition fees at public schools. Wherever you're from and whatever you're studying, you will not pay tuition fees in Norway. You can get a world-class education tuition fee-free. Norway - Quick Facts & Figures International students 23,000 Academic Year September - June Currency Norwegian Krone (NOK) Norway also has a large economy. This makes for great internship and graduate job opportunities. English is so widely spoken that, in places like Oslo and Bergen, it's possible to find a job even without knowing Norwegian. The economy is also diverse. This means that studies and opportunities are widespread, from the fuel industry, to tech, to the arts, Norway has it all. Aside from studying, Norway is also a nature lover's paradise, with forests, mountains and, of course, the fjords. In winter, you can even see the Northern Lights. Norwegians also love to eat fresh. Freshly caught fish and fresh fruit and vegetables are the norm. Norway's beauty comes from its location. It borders Sweden to the south, Finland to the south-east and Russia to the east as well as the Atlantic and the Norwegian Sea. Norway has something to offer many international students. This guide tells you all you need to know. Want to learn about how the higher education system works in Norway? Learn more Ready to look at education in Norway? Use our search engine to find and compare top programs in Norway. Learn more Norway is well known for its mountains, fjord coastline, sea-faring history, unique coastal life, midnight sunlight during summer, and brilliant Winter Olympics performance. It's also a popular choice for international study, offering a good selection of universities, including four entries in the QS World University Rankings® 2019. Due in part to its offshore oil and gas deposits, Norway has the fourth-highest per capita income in the world and one of the highest standards of living. It's a member of many international organizations, including the UN, NATO, the Council of Europe and the Nordic Council, the WTO and the OECD. It's also part of the Schengen Area, and maintains close ties with the US and the European Union (EU), despite rejecting full EU membership. Norway is also renowned for its contributions to art and culture - it is, after all, the homeland of hugely influential figures such as playwright Henrik Ibsen and painter Edvard Munch, creator of The Scream, one of the most recognizable paintings in the world. Another major driver of tourism to Norway is the stunning Arctic Circle phenomena known as the northern lights. If all that appeals but you're worried about losing a digit in the freezing cold, worry no more. The warm Gulf Stream means Norway isn't actually as cold as you might imagine. Coastal areas are relatively mild and average winter temperatures rarely dip below -4oC (24.8oF) in the capital city Oslo, so one can venture around fairly comfortably (in layers, yes, but without turning blue).
